Ideas can bring us together
Complex problems. Ever-shifting political, social and economic landscapes. Multi-faceted national and international issues that challenge the health of the planet, our collective welfare, and the ability of people around the world to live peaceful, meaningful and productive lives.

This describes the world we live in today; these are the kinds of challenges we need to make sense of. At the Federation for the Humanities and Social Sciences, we believe that Canada’s future success lies in cross-disciplinary, creative approaches to the issues that confront us as a nation, such as energy policy, an aging population, and the imperative to ensure a shared and just future with Aboriginal peoples.

Now, more than ever, we need to bring together content, context and technology to forge dynamic new pathways of knowledge.

For every new issue or crisis that can benefit from a scientific or technical solution, there is an equally important role for analysis, contextual understanding and sound policymaking. There is an ever-present existential need for creative, agile minds that can think critically, forge innovative ideas, and respond capably and intelligently to the issues facing us.

With these goals in mind, the Federation promotes scholarship in the arts, humanities and social sciences. As President of the Federation, I have endeavoured to relay in the public sphere the value of a liberal arts education and the importance of research and learning in the humanities and social sciences to Canada’s future. Our 2013 Congress at the University of Victoria was a major highlight this year, bringing together some 7,600 academics, researchers, policy-makers and practitioners over eight days to develop fresh perspectives on a wide range of questions.

In keeping with our 2011–2015 Strategic Plan, this year we continued to broaden our reach, increase our relevance and invest in key relationships.

REACH
Ideas can... engage. We ramped up our communications this year by publishing op-eds, a monthly newsletter, a bi-weekly blog and daily tweets — initiatives that markedly improved our online and social media presence. As well, Congress succeeded in attracting considerable media attention in Canada, but also internationally.
RELEVANCE

Ideas can... influence. This was another stellar year for our Big Thinking lecture series, which takes place on Parliament Hill, on the road and at Congress, and always draws an inspiring array of speakers. We have also been busy in the halls of government, discussing the value of the arts, the humanities and social sciences to Canada with elected officials, political staff and senior officials.

RELATIONSHIPS

Ideas can... bring us together. Our 80+ member associations, 79 member institutions and six affiliates are the Federation. As a not-for-profit, we depend on our partnerships when hosting events and contributing to the policy development process. We are grateful for the ongoing support from the Social Science and Humanities Research Council (SSHRC), and this year we attracted several new partners in the public, private and not-for-profit sectors.

Looking ahead to 2014, the Federation’s mission to advance knowledge-sharing and relationship-building across the arts, the humanities and social sciences remains critical in building a more humane world.

BIG THINKING... ON THE HILL

Each year, the Federation organizes six Big Thinking breakfasts on Parliament Hill, featuring leading Canadian researchers offering timely findings and breakthrough perspectives on a range of public policy-related research topics. With dozens of Members of Parliament, senators, public servants and decision-makers in attendance, Big Thinking on the Hill fosters dialogue on pressing policy issues, connecting the social sciences and humanities directly to policy development.

Big Thinking on the Hill is made possible through the support of the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada (SSHRC). This year, individual breakfasts were sponsored by Google Canada, the Canadian Psychological Association, the Canadian Research Data Centre Network and the Institute for Science Society and Policy.

BIG THINKING... ON THE ROAD

This series is also about expanding dialogues and strengthening relationships, new and old. Big Thinking on the Road expands research conversations across the country, reaching a spectrum of politicians, researchers, the public and beyond. This year, the Federation was pleased that Kevin Kee of Brock University gave a Big Thinking lecture entitled Borders without Boundaries at the Royal Society of Canada Annual General Meeting in Banff, Alberta.
BIG THINKING... AT CONGRESS

With thousands of scholars congregating at the Congress of the Humanities and Social Sciences, Big Thinking is a focal point for interdisciplinary programming. The Big Thinking series profiles leading scholars and public figures who present forward-looking research, thought-provoking ideas and solutions to the critical issues of our time.

Daniel Weinstock: On context

“If we just think about the problems of the day without placing them in a broader, deeper context, we might just end up repeating errors of the past.”
CONGRESS 2013

At the annual Congress of the Humanities and Social Sciences, about 70 scholarly associations converge to each hold their annual conference under one umbrella. Beyond its role as Canada’s largest interdisciplinary gathering of scholars (and one of the largest in the world), Congress brings together academics, researchers, policy-makers, and practitioners to share findings, refine ideas, and build partnerships that will help shape our future.

More than 7,600 delegates gathered over eight days at Congress 2013, held at the University of Victoria, B.C. This year’s theme was “@ the edge.” With innovative ideas and new perspectives, “@ the edge” provided exciting opportunities for unique conversations, thoughtful dialogue and new initiatives.

BY THE NUMBERS

87% of survey respondents rated Congress 2013 as “good” or “excellent”

7,600+ attendees

68 associations

200+ local volunteers

60 exhibitors at Expo

9,500 tweets

164 media stories

$9-12 million economic impact estimated to Greater Victoria
As a central part of the University of Victoria’s 50th anniversary celebrations, Congress engaged researchers from around the globe as well as the local public in cultural events, from poetry readings to an international fair to a concert by singer-songwriter, artist and activist Buffy Sainte-Marie. Congress 2013 programming featured:

- Eight Big Thinking speakers (see page 5)
- A dynamic Career Corner series aimed at equipping the next generation of scholars for life both in and beyond academia
- The Storytellers Competition, hosted by SSHRC, which saw university students creatively communicating their research projects
- An afternoon with the Governor General, His Excellency the Right Honourable David Johnston, who met with co-op students, community-campus collaborators and First Nations attendees
- Special programming on equity issues and open access
- A dynamic Congress Expo with 60 exhibitors, including publishers and research groups
- Thousands of research presentations in more than 70 disciplines

Media coverage at Congress was exceptional this year, with research stories twice making the front page of the National Post, The Globe and Mail, Vancouver Sun, Victoria Times-Colonist, Huffington Post, CBC Radio and dozens of other news outlets covered aspects of Congress 2013, from the innovative research to the thought-provoking Big Thinking speakers to the cultural programming and even the logistical challenges of hosting such an enormous event.

AWARDS TO SCHOLARLY PUBLICATIONS PROGRAM

The Awards to Scholarly Publications Program (ASPP) is the Federation’s competitive funding program to support the publication of the best scholarly books on topics in the humanities and social sciences.

Through the ASPP, the Federation encourages excellence in humanities and social science scholarship by offering 180 Publication Grants of $8,000 and five Translation Grants of $12,000 each year, contributing a total of $1.5 million annually to the dissemination of Canadian research. Funding for the ASPP is provided by SSHRC.

Many ASPP-funded books go on to win awards within their disciplines. This year, the Federation was especially proud to see two ASPP-funded books recognized by the Governor General’s Literary Awards:

- L’Alberta autophage : Identités, mythes et discours du pétrole dans l’Ouest canadien by Dominique Perron (University of Calgary Press) was a finalist in the French Non-fiction category.

Sandra Djwa: On the ASPP

“The ASPP helps to fund the publication of books that make a valuable contribution to our understanding of Canadian life and culture. Its role in supporting Canadian scholarly publishing helps us to better understand our national heritage. These books provide essential literary texts and background information to Canada’s twentieth century.”

CANADA PRIZES

The Federation awards the Canada Prizes annually to the best scholarly books in the humanities and social sciences that have received funding from the ASPP. Every year, four prizes of $2,500 are awarded.

This was a year of transformation for the Canada Prizes. Highlights include:

• A redefined mission: to recognize books that make an exceptional contribution to scholarship, are engagingly written, and enrich the social, cultural and intellectual life of Canada

• A new logo that draws upon several images—including a bookmark, an award ribbon and a podium—that speak to the Prizes’ mission, which is to highlight the importance of scholarship to Canadian society and to provoke and inform national conversations on important topics

• A high-profile jury, including past winners, noted scholars and public intellectuals such as Denise Bombardier, Natalie Zemon Davis, Charlotte Gray, Mark Kingwell and Daniel Weinstock

More than 75 people attended the March 2013 awards ceremony in Ottawa, with John Ralston Saul presenting. See the videos at: www.youtube.com/IdeasIdee.

PRIX DU CANADA EN SCIENCES SOCIALES
The Federation is active in policy outreach and advocacy. We work on behalf of our members to promote the value of research and learning in the humanities and social sciences.

FEDERAL BUDGET

In advocating for the humanities and social sciences during the federal budget process, this year we:

- Presented recommendations on Budget 2013 to the House of Commons Standing Committee on Finance;
- Prepared a written submission to the House of Commons Standing Committee on Finance’s pre-budget consultation for Budget 2014; and
- Met with ministers, Members of Parliament from all parties and senior officials to advocate for prioritising funding for the humanities and social sciences in Budget 2014.

OUTREACH

Federation board members and staff are active in policy discussions and events. As such, this year we:

- Orchestrated 16 meetings with ministers, ministerial staff, Members of Parliament and senators
- Held speaking roles at events across Canada, such as:
  - Power of the Arts National Forum, hosted by the Michaëlle Jean Foundation and Carleton University
  - Canadian Council of Deans of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences Annual General Meeting, at Carleton University
  - University of Winnipeg's 100th Convocation
  - Royal Society of Canada’s Annual General Meeting
  - World Social Sciences Forum, hosted by the International Social Science Council
- Participated in many other events, including the Trudeau Foundation Conference, SSHRC Leaders, Killam Prize Symposium, the Canada Foundation for Innovation’s Annual Public Meeting, and the Digital Infrastructure Summit.

POLICY

The Federation constantly strives to ensure that the humanities and social sciences have a strong voice in discussions about Canadian research. For example, in 2013 we:

- Promoted the recognition of the value of the humanities and social sciences in the update of the federal Science and Technology strategy, expected in 2014;
- Recommended that the Canadian Institutes of Health Research (CIHR) strike a committee of leading social sciences and humanities scholars to provide direction for CIHR’s proposed granting structure changes, which was subsequently implemented;
- Submitted recommendations on digital scholarship and open access in response to two consultations from granting agencies; and
- Successfully placed articles, op-eds and letters in mainstream and specialised media.
FINANCIAL OVERVIEW

The Federation continued to focus on effective program delivery in 2013, ending the year in a strong financial position, with a modest surplus, healthy reserves and a balanced budget for 2014.

With an aim to enhance the Federation’s program and event delivery, a decision was made to modify the financial year-end from September 30 to December 31. This change allows the Federation to be more responsive to opportunities and challenges that present themselves throughout the year.

SUMMARY OF 2012-2013 FINANCIAL REPORT

The financial information presented in this annual report is therefore based on 15 months of operation, covering the period from October 1, 2012 to December 31, 2013. Due to this change in the reporting period, there is no comparison data provided from the previous year.

Congress 2013 at the University of Victoria was a great success; this, combined with growth in event sponsorships, resulted in 2013 revenues being slightly higher than anticipated. Our revenue stream from SSHRC has remained stable and membership was unchanged from 2012.

The Federation’s investment income grew this year, due to growth in financial markets. Investment holdings are of the highest quality, to mitigate the Federation’s market risk.

Cost control efforts over the past few years have allowed the Federation to reset baseline spending, resulting in below-budget expenditure results. The Federation is in a strong financial position to continue to support the reach, relevance and relationship goals it strives to achieve.
