Biography

Malacrida is internationally recognized as a leading scholar in the fields of disability studies and the sociology of the body. She is a sought-after speaker on qualitative research methods, the history of medicine, childbirth and medicalization, the social construction of difference, and the history of institutionalization and eugenic sterilization in Canada.

Her research engages with both historical and current sociological concerns. She is the author of several books on disability, health and the body, including Mourning the Dreams: Miscarriage, Stillbirth and Early Infant Death (Left Coast Press), Sociology of the Body: a Reader (Oxford University Press), Cold Comfort: Mothers, Professionals and ADHD (University of Toronto Press), and A Special Hell: Institutional Life in Alberta's Eugenic Years (University of Toronto Press).

Malacrida is engaged in two ongoing research projects. "Eugenics to Newgenics in Alberta" explores the continuities and disjunctures between historical eugenic actions and current responses to disabled people's sexuality and reproduction. "Childbirth and Choice" examines the cultural, structural, moral, social and discursive contexts that both constrain and produce women's childbirth experiences.

Statement of Intent

As a social scientist, research administrator and member of the recent Federal Review Panel for Fundamental Science, I am keen to elevate the profile and potential of Canadian Social Science and Humanities (SSH) research. I am convinced of the importance of the Social Sciences and Humanities in informing public debate and policy, helping us to live better lives, preserving and enriching our culture and heritage, and fostering a creative, vibrant and inclusive society. My own work has focused on questions of inclusion, equity and marginalization, and I will carry these values forward in service of SSH research in Canada. My engagement with the Federal Review Panel and my work fostering the research of others as an administrator confirms that there is still much work to be accomplished within the Canadian research landscape in terms of balanced levels of recognition and support for SSH research.
