Independent Visions: An Evening of Feminist/Queer Films

Independent Visions is devoted to making independent and experimental media accessible to a diverse audience and is presented by Dunlop Art Gallery and Regina Public Library Film Theatre in partnership with the University of Regina Department of Film and the Saskatchewan Filmpool Cooperative. Co-presented with Queer City Cinema.

In partnership with Congress 2018, hosted by University of Regina, Independent Visions presents two screenings of documentary and experimental films by queer and feminist filmmakers from across the country, with an emphasis on short works by Montreal and Prairie filmmakers exploring themes around history, the body, disorientation, play, pleasure, and possibility. This program is a curatorial collaboration between the National Film Board, the Dunlop Art Gallery, the Film Studies Association of Canada, and the Sexuality Studies Association.

« Independent visions »: Une soirée de films féministes et queer

« Independent Visions » a pour vocation de rendre les œuvres expérimentales et indépendantes accessibles à un public diversifié. L'événement est présenté par la Dunlop Art Gallery et la Regina Public Library Film Theatre, en partenariat avec le Département de cinéma de l'Université de Regina et le Saskatchewan Filmpool Cooperative. Présenté en collaboration avec le Queer City Cinema.

En partenariat avec le Congrès 2018, tenu à l'Université de Regina, « Independent Visions » présente deux projections de films documentaires et expérimentaux de cinéastes queer et féministes provenant des quatre coins pays, particulièrement des courts métrages de cinéastes de Montréal et des Prairies qui explorent des thèmes autour de l'histoire, le corps, la désorientation, le jeu, le plaisir, et la possibilité. Ce programme est organisé en collaboration par l'Office National du Film, la Dunlop Art Gallery, l'Association Canadienne d'Études Cinématographiques et l'Association d'Études de la Sexualité.

Neither Straight Nor Flat: Prairie Women Filmmakers

Curated by Rebecca Sullivan (University of Calgary) and Blair Fornwald (Dunlop Art Gallery)
This program features Prairie women filmmakers past and present, featuring films produced by Studio D (the NFB's women's unit 1974-96), alongside contemporary works by Saskatchewan queer/feminist filmmakers. We gratefully acknowledge support from the Insight Grant Program of the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council, and the University of Calgary Institute for Gender Research.

Ni droit ni plat: Femmes cinéastes des prairies

Organisé par Rebecca Sullivan (University of Calgary) et Blair Fornwald (Dunlop Art Gallery)
Ce programme met l'accent sur des femmes réalisatrices des Prairies d'hier et d'aujourd'hui, dont des films produits par le Studio D de l'ONF (1974-96), aux côtés d'œuvres contemporaines par des cinéastes queer/féministes de la Saskatchewan. Nous remercions le Conseil de recherches en sciences humaines, Programme Savoir; et l'Institute for Gender Research de l'Université de Calgary pour leur soutien.

The Feeling of Falling: Queer Ecologies, Uncertain Space

Curated by Nik Forrest (John Abbott College) and Alanna Thain (McGill University)
This program of queer and feminist experimental shorts from Montreal-based artists explores how bodies and spaces collaborate to produce feelings of disorientation, play, pleasure and possibility. We gratefully acknowledge support from the Moving Image Research Lab (McGill) and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council.

Atmosphères Affectives: Entre des écologies queer et des espaces incertains

Ce programme de courts métrages expérimentaux queer et féministes des artistes montréalaises explore comment les corps et les espaces collaborent pour produire des sensations ludiques, désorientantes, jouissives, et spéculatives. Commissaires Nik Forrest et Alanna Thain, avec le soutien du Conseil de recherches en sciences humaines et le Moving Image Research Lab (McGill).

“The Set is (Still) Closed!” Exploring Canadian Production Culture at Cinepix

Founded in 1962, Cinepix is best known as the production company responsible for the erotic film, Valérie (Denis Héroux, 1968), and two early David Cronenberg films, Shivers (1975) and Rabid (1977). Little research, however, has been conducted on their later films, or on Cinepix as a company. This presentation examines the dynamism of Cinepix as a production company, shaped by its leaders and larger political economic concerns. The research takes a historically-oriented Production Cultures approach, that involves examining original annotated scripts, memos between workers, minutes from production meetings, producers’ comments on rushes, original advertising concepts, press kits, brochures, and annotated storyboards. In examining these behind-the-scenes production documents, this research on Cinepix complicates theories of national cinema, and specifically confuses conventional wisdom of what ‘Canadian’ cinema is and should be, arguing that examining production cultures opens up an innovative, heterogeneous way of conceptualizing the Canadian film industry.

« Le plateau est (encore) fermé! » Exploration de la culture de production canadienne chez Cinepix

Fondée en 1962, Cinepix est essentiellement connue pour être la société de production du film érotique, Valérie (Denis Héroux, 1968), et de deux des premiers films de David Cronenberg, Shivers (1975) et Rabid (1977). Cependant, peu de recherches ont été menées sur leurs films ultérieurs, ou sur Cinepix en tant que société. Cette présentation examine la dynamique de Cinepix en tant que société de production façonnée par ses dirigeants et par les plus vastes intérêts politico-économiques. Cette recherche adopte une approche historique des cultures de production qui consiste à examiner les scénarios annotés originaux, les mémos entre travailleurs, les rapports des réunions de production, les commentaires des producteurs sur les épreuves, les concepts publicitaires originaux, les dossiers de presse, les brochures, et les scénarimages annotés. En examinant ces documents de production en coulisse, cette recherche sur Cinepix complique les théories du cinéma national et confond spécifiquement la sagesse conventionnelle de ce qu’est et devrait être le cinéma « canadien », soutenant que l’examen des cultures de production ouvre une voie novatrice et hétérogène pour conceptualiser l’industrie cinématographique canadienne.

Figuring the Social: Cinematic Crowds, Scenes and Circles

In contemporary cinema, it has been argued, the human crowd has disappeared. One finds, in its place, the bourgeois in-group of the art film or the quasi-human zombie mob of the horror film. The crowd is but one figure of the social, however. In this presentation, Professor Straw will look at the ways in which, in film history, different sorts of social groups fill the space of the image, from the subcultural scene through the revolutionary mob.

This talk is the 40th annual Martin Walsh Memorial Lecture of the Film Studies Association of Canada, established in 1978 to honour our first President, Martin Walsh. The lecture features an internationally recognized film scholar who is invited to speak about their current research.

Modeler le social: La foule cinématique, les scènes et les cercles

Dans le cinéma contemporain, l'on avance que la foule humaine a disparu. L'on trouve à sa place l'intra-groupe bourgeois du film artistique ou la foule de zombie quasi humain du film d'horreur. La foule n'est qu'un modèle du social, cependant. Dans cette présentation, le professeur Straw se penche sur la façon dont, dans l'histoire du cinéma, différents types de groupes sociaux remplissent l'espace de l'image, de la scène sous-culturelle à la foule révolutionnaire.

Cette présentation est la 40^e Conférence Annuelle Commémorative Martin Walsh de l'Association Canadienne d'Études Cinématographiques, créée en 1978 en l'honneur de notre premier président, Martin Walsh. La conférence met en vedette un chercheur de cinéma reconnu à l'échelle internationale, invité à parler de ses recherches actuelles.

Recent hires at Vancouver, Regina, Winnipeg and Ontario art galleries have doubled the number of professional Indigenous curators of contemporary art in North Turtle Island. The critical discourse around Indigenous curation and creative sovereignty is contributing to the decolonization of many institutional spaces, while Indigenous-led curatorial projects, writing, and the pursuit of advanced degrees proliferate. This Community Connections event considers these issues through a curatorial roundtable, an artist-led walk, and an innovative concentric Indigenous talking circle, including local experts, students, artists and national and international guests.

(Événement d'après-midi « Liens Communautaires »)

Organisatrice : Christine Ramsay (Université de Regina)

Les récentes recrues des galeries d'art de Vancouver, de Regina, de Winnipeg et de l'Ontario ont doublé le nombre de conservateurs professionnels autochtones de l'art contemporain à North Turtle Island. Le discours critique sur les conservateurs autochtones et la souveraineté créative contribue à la décolonisation de nombreux espaces institutionnels, tandis que les projets de conservation dirigés par les autochtones ainsi que les récits et la poursuite de diplômes d'études supérieures prolifèrent. Cet événement « Liens Communautaires » aborde ces questions au moyen d'une table ronde curatoriale, d'une marche dirigée par des artistes et d'un cercle de discussion autochtone concentrique novateur, comprenant des experts locaux, des étudiants, des artistes et des invités nationaux et internationaux des experts locaux, des étudiants, des artistes et des invités nationaux et internationaux.

Reginans consider Wascana Centre, one of the largest urban parks in North America, to be one of the city's crown jewels: a lush green oasis beside a lake. And yet, like the rest of the city, Wascana Centre is an artifact of the displacement of Indigenous people and indigenous species by settlers. The 2011 drowning in Wascana Lake of a homeless person living in the park suggests the ongoing marginalization of Indigenous people in this city: passersby refused to call 911 while the man was drowning, even though his friend asked them to. Our walk through the park, from the University of Regina to the Mackenzie Art Gallery, will enable us to experience the park's urban history and amenities while reminding us that the park, and the city, are sites of colonial violence as well as of resistance to that ongoing history.

Les Reginiens considèrent le Centre Wascana, l'un des plus grands parcs urbains en Amérique du Nord, comme l'un des joyaux de leur ville : une oasis verdoyante au bord d'un lac. Et pourtant, comme le reste de la ville, le Centre Wascana est un artéfact du déplacement des peuples autochtones et des espèces indigènes par les colons. La noyade en 2011 dans le lac Wascana d'un sans-abri vivant dans le parc souligne la marginalisation continue des autochtones dans cette ville : des passants ont refusé d'appeler le 911 pendant que l'homme se noyait, bien que son ami le leur demandait. Notre promenade dans le parc, de l'Université de Regina à la Galerie d'art Mackenzie, nous permettra de découvrir l'histoire et les commodités urbaines du parc tout en nous rappelant que le parc et la ville sont des lieux de violence coloniale et de résistance à cette histoire continue.

Themes: Sovereign Indigenous display territories; decolonizing the museum; community talk back (TBC)

This gathering consists of concentric circles with the three Indigenous art leaders, host, and invited guests holding the inner circle. Other guests and witnesses take up the other seats. The Indigenous art leaders will each talk about their area of action and thought for about fifteen minutes each. The host will then lead a discussion about Indigenous curatorial and community practices; sovereign Aboriginal display territories in and apart from mainstream institutions; possibilities of conciliatory and collaborative art and curatorial practices; and other topics, first with the inner circle, and then as a general discussion.

In light of recent events -- including the #metoo movement, the release of multiple reports detailing severe inequity in various national film industries -- this year’s annual FSAC conference is a particularly appropriate time for us to reflect on the impact feminist film studies has made in Canada – and on all the work that remains to be done. By staging a conversation that includes both faculty members and graduate students, from both Anglophone and Francophone institutions, this workshop seeks to jumpstart that act of reflection.
