Friday, May 31

13:30-
16:00

Roundtable and Workshop: "Was kommt nach dem Gradstudium: Jobs, Skills, Selbstmarketing" (Buchanan Tower 997)

Sponsored by the Waterloo Center for German Studies

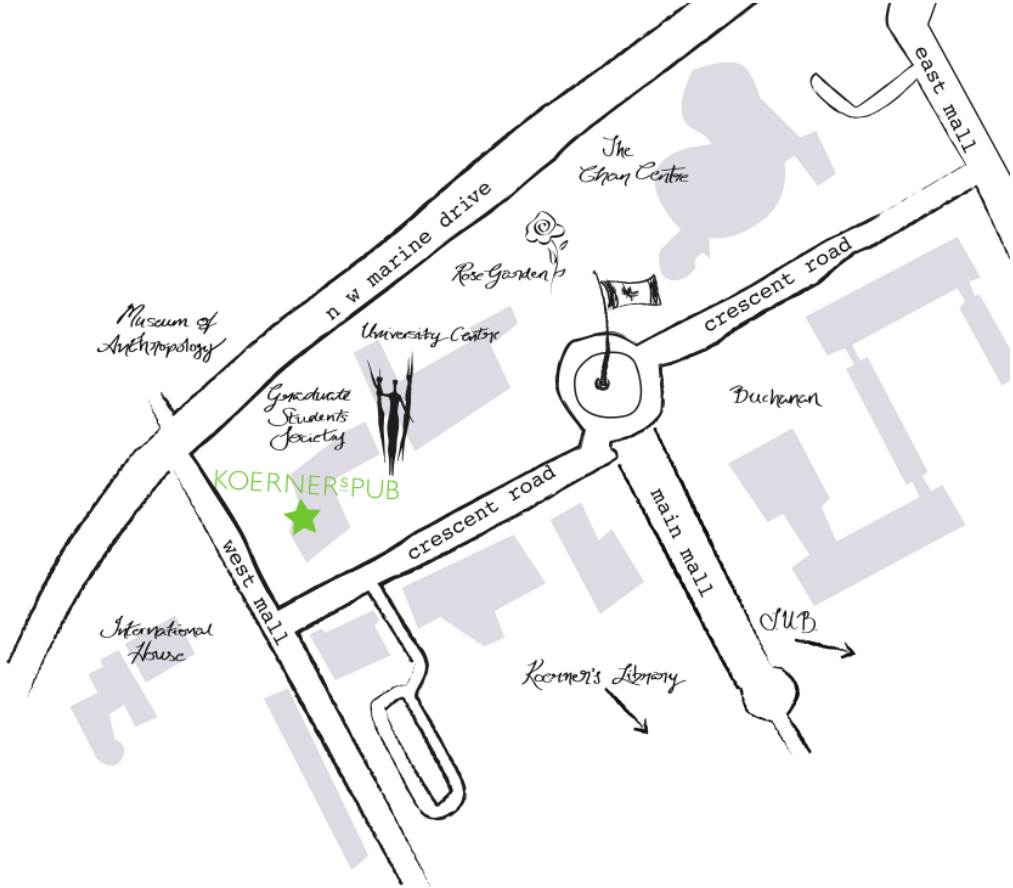

Organizer: Belinda Kleinhans, Texas Tech University

Participants: Belinda Kleinhans (Texas Tech University), Alec Cattell (Texas Tech University), Laura Schuster (Localization Specialist at Hilton), Lydia Butt Tang (Assistant Director of Programs in the MLA office)

This roundtable workshop is aimed at German Studies graduate students (MA as well as PhD) as well as advising graduate faculty to familiarize them with possible career paths after completing a graduate degree in German Studies. Following the MLA model of connected academics, the workshop portion will focus on transferable skills acquired in the graduate programs, as well as cover resume and CV writing. The roundtable portion will speak to job opportunities and feature speakers from outside of academia (localization) as well as inside of academia (tenure track as well as non-tenure track options such as adjunct, staff positions, professors of practice, etc.) to help prospective German Studies MAs as well as PhDs to navigate the job world after completing their degree.

16:00-18:00 Board Meeting (Buchanan Tower 997)

18:00 Pre-conference socializing Koerner's Pub (located in Thea Koerner House, University Centre)
Compliments of the UBC Department. of Central, Eastern, and Northern European Studies (details at event)

Remembering Genocide in the 21st Century: The Failures and Promises of Digital Trauma Culture

Wulf Kansteiner, Aarhus University

Chair: Stephan Jaeger (University of Manitoba)

An analysis of Holocaust-related content matter distributed via video games, social media sites, file sharing platforms, and brick-and-mortar memory institutions reveals serious problems. Significant apprehension about immersive simulations of Holocaust history and pervasive patterns of censorship are tipping the scales of remediation towards time-tested aesthetic strategies of Holocaust interpretation. As a result, contemporary digital Holocaust memory sidesteps emergent, participatory, and multi-directional forms of communicative memory favoring instead the monotone broadcasting of cosmopolitan political values within carefully controlled cultural settings. Official Holocaust memory runs the risk of losing political relevance and failing to take advantage of self-reflexive memory opportunities inherent in virtual reality and serious gaming technologies. In this regard Holocaust memory can learn a great deal from the use of immersive and fully interactive digital technologies used for example for the experience and remembrance of aboriginal culture and aboriginal suffering in Canada and Australia.

Wulf Kansteiner is professor of history at Aarhus University, Denmark. A cultural and intellectual historian of twentieth-century Europe, Kansteiner has published widely in the fields of media history, memory studies, historical theory, and Holocaust studies. He is the author of In Pursuit of German Memory: History, Television, and Politics after Auschwitz (2006) and coeditor of The Politics of Memory in Postwar Europe (2006), Historical Representation and Historical Truth (2009), Den Holocaust erzählen: Historiographie zwischen wissenschaftlicher Empirie und narrative Kreativität (2013), and Probing the Ethics of Holocaust Culture (2016). He is also co-editor of the journal Memory Studies.

This has been driven by a renewed and re-theorized interest in how text-based practices mediate and are mediated by human activity across diverse media, linguistic, and discursive channels often captured by term “multiliteracies” (New London Group, 1996). Accordingly, literacy frameworks are associated with an increased attention to in how culturally-specific literacy practices afford different ways of designing meaning. Within the context of these shifting paradigms, this talk will consider the particular potential of aesthetics and literary play in fostering German learners’ multiple literacies through stylistic and symbolic awareness. Based on examples of learners’ engagements with works of literary prose and with the new literacy practices found in digital games, the talk will show how putting learner’s into ‘conversation’ with works that evoke aesthetic response can create opportunities for language and culture learning.

Chantelle Warner is Associate Professor of German Studies, faculty member of the interdisciplinary program in Second Language Acquisition and Teaching, and Co-Director of the Center for Educational Resources in Culture, Language and Literacy at the University of Arizona, where she also directs the German Language Program. Her research focuses on affective and experiential dimensions of language use and learning, foreign language literacy development, stylistics, and literary pragmatics and has been published in a range of journals including, Language and Literature, Language Learning and Technology, and L2 Journal. Her monograph The Pragmatics of Literary Testimony explored the glamour of authenticity underlying the reception of a number of works of (quasi-)autobiographical literature in the latter part of the 20th century and examined the kinds of stylistic effects that seem to evoke this response. She is a founding co-editor of the journal Critical Multilingualism Studies.

Queer Lives on Display: In the Archives of The Institute of Sexual Science in Berlin

Prof. Heike Bauer, Birkbeck, University of London

(organized by UBC's Rare Books and Special Collections)

(Irving K. Barber Learning Centre, Lillooet Room)

What does it mean to 'archive' the lives of people whose bodies and desires do not match the norms of their time? This talk discusses the Institute of Sexual Sciences in Berlin, arguably the world's first LGBTI archive, building on recent queer and trans scholarship on the uses of archival practices in transformative politics. The Institute was founded in 1919 by the influential Jewish sexologist Magnus Hirschfeld (1868-1935). Best known today for his homosexual rights campaigns, conception of 'sexual intermediaries' and foundational studies of what he called 'transvestism', Hirschfeld is one of the most influential figures in modern sex research and activism. At the Institute he accumulated a unique 'archive of sex' full of books, journals, clinical notes, objects, visual materials other documents relating to LGBTI issues. This library was destroyed in a Nazi attack in 1933, although materials from the collection survive to this day. Examining the Institute's complex history, the talk will reckon with the limits as well as the gains of 'evidence' based sexual rights politics.

Heike Bauer is Professor of Modern Literature and Cultural History and Head of the Department of English & Humanities at Birkbeck College, University of London. She has published widely on the sexology, literature and the modern history of sexuality including most recently the books The Hirschfeld Archives: Violence, Death, and Modern Queer Culture (Temple UP, 2017; available open access: <http://www.oapen.org/search?identifier=628406>) and (ed.) Sexology and Translation: Cultural and Scientific Encounters Across the Modern World (Temple UP, 2015).

In collaboration with the rare books exhibition "A Queer Century, 1869-1969: A Rare Books Exhibition", June 1-7: 2019 marks several major anniversaries in queer history: 150 years since the emergence of homosexuality as a named concept and fifty years since the Stonewall riots and the decriminalization of homosexuality in Canada. "A Queer Century, 1869-1969" brings together rare books, art, manuscripts, and ephemera from the holdings of UBC's Rare Books and Special Collections to tell the story of this pivotal century in queer cultural history. More information about the initiative behind the exhibition available at <https://qcp.arts.ubc.ca/>. Organized by Dr. Kyle Frackman and Dr. Gregory Mackie (UBC).
